

Tony Perez Captures Gehrig Award

It was Dave Bristol, managing the Cincinnati Reds over a decade ago, who said of him, "if the game goes long enough, Tony Perez will win it for you."

Tony Perez, looking forward to prolonging a career that has already spanned 16 productive seasons in the major leagues, is the 26th winner of Phi Delta Theta's Lou Gehrig Memorial Award.

In his first season in the American League in 1980, the veteran slugger known for his clutch hitting, drove in 105 runs, stroked 25 home runs and 31 doubles with a .275 average for the Boston Red Sox.

It marked the seventh time in his long career that Perez has enjoyed a 100-plus RBI campaign.

"Tony Perez has always been a fine athlete and a fine man," says Ritter Collett, the chairman of the Gehrig Award selection committee and sports editor of the Dayton Journal Herald who knew him well during his dozen years with the Reds.

"In addition to his slugging statistics, Perez has two intangibles that make him a very worthy Gehrig award winner," Collett says.

"He was a big part of the emotional glue that held the Big Red Machine together during its championship years. More importantly, he is living proof that Latin athletes can possess an even temperment and a thorough dedication to team play."

Born in Camaguey, Cuba, Perez, his wife Pituka and their two sons became naturalized U.S. citizens in 1973.

Perez was a skinny, 160-pound second baseman when he reported to the Reds farm system camp in 1960. He was sent to the Geneva N.Y. farm club where he played second base until chased over to third to make room for an American rookie named Pete Rose.

Rose reached the majors two years ahead of Perez but when Tony was called up in September of 1964, he was in big leagues to stay.

His slugging power on a body that grew up to 200 well distributed pounds began to assert itself in 1967 when he drove in 102 runs with 26 home runs. His home run won the All-Star game for the National League that summer.

Perez was always overshadowed by his illustrious teammates — first Rose and Johnny Bench and later Joe Morgan and George Foster during the heyday of the Big Red Machine. But his value to the Reds was always apparent.

It is probably more than coincidence that the Reds have won only one Western Division championship in the four seasons after Tony was traded to Montreal.

Perez resides in the off-season in San Juan, where he lives with Pituka, Victor, now 14, and Tony, Jr., 11.

Perez is the third member of the Big Red Machine to win the Gehrig award — Rose and Bench preceeding him.

"It is a great honor to be selected to join so many great players who have won this award," Perez said. "I do not know much about a fraternity, but I am proud to be singled out. My sons will have a better education than I had."

Perez, who will accept his award next summer in Boston's Fenway Park, does not look for an early retirement.

"I felt strong and healthy at the end of the season," he put it. "My contract with the Red Sox has two more years to run. The DH makes it possible for a man to play as long as his reflexes are good.

"Right now, I still think I can play first base," he said, laughing. "My friend Pete is now a first baseman. Maybe I can last as long as he will."

Pat Foley and 'The Hyatt Touch'

His major in college was far removed from hotel management. But it played a big role in fitting Pat Foley (Washington State '55) for a career that has brought him to the presidency of a major corporation with 55 of some of the most deluxe hotels in the world and 12 more opening by the end of 1981.

In 1955, Foley, received a degree in education from Washington State University in Pullman. He came to the university on an athletic scholarship, having been an outstanding high school athlete at Kelso, Wa. He chose education as his major and continued those studies after a brief fling with collegiate basketball.

Graduation meant an immediate career in the Army, since Foley had been commissioned as a second lieutenant through the WSU reserve officers' training program.

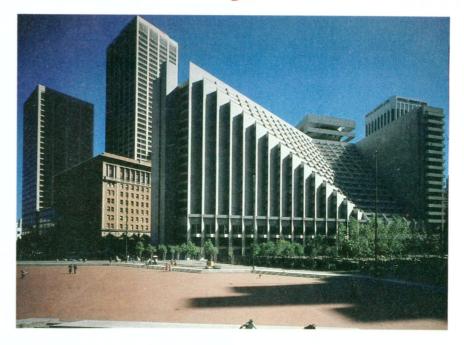

Three years in the Army followed, most of the time spent in Germany. He held the rank of first lieutenant when he returned to civilian life in 1957.

Foley flirted with a career in education, working in the physical education program of the Seattle Parks Department and in the Seattle schools for a brief period until he decided to try the business field.

"Like many young men and women just out of college or the military, I was unsure what I really wanted to do," he recalls. "I leaned toward education, but I had the feeling that perhaps a business career could be satisfying, too.

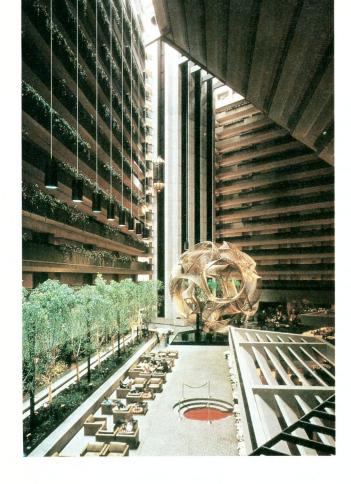

Change of Direction

"I enjoyed teaching, and it was both a wrench and a personal challenge for me to take a job in the hospitality industry, about which I knew little, when an opening came as a desk clerk at the SAN FRANCISCO: Unique exterior architecture, such as the Hyatt Regency San Francisco, has become a Hyatt trademark under Pat Foley's leadership.

IN THE PHOTOS: (upper left) The lobby of Hyatt Regency San Francisco, now famous for weekly tea dances, is similar in size to a football field. (upper right) The Hyatt Regency Atlanta opened in 1967 and skyrocketed Hyatt to fame while establishing an entire new concept of hotel for the lodging industry. (lower left) The Park Hyatt, on Michigan Avenue in Chicago, is a totally new Hyatt concept spearheaded by Pat Foley. Unlike the deluxe convention properties Hyatt operates, this new hotel is small, intimate, and geared to providing the ultimate in service for the individual traveler. Seattle Olympic Hotel.

"I soon found I had chosen the proper field. The work was interesting, satisfying, challeng-

Foley moved up rapidly, to assistant manager and then front office manager of Seattle's leading hotel property, and in 1962 came to the attention of a comparitively new West Coast hotel chain, the Hyatt organization. The firm had begun with an Airport Hyatt House in Los Angeles and later added units near three other airports. Hyatt's early trademark of quality service made the company a success, and it was with a feeling of anticipation that Foley joined as resident manager of the Seattle Airport Hvatt House.

The move was a good one.

His attention to detail without letting details keep him from seeing the big picture, together with his understanding of the personal needs and feelings of fellow workers and guests, his natural leadership qualities and his ability to instruct without being a pedagogue brought him to the attention of the top management of the Hyatt Corporation.

The young man had a meteoric rise. After 18 months he was promoted to general manager of a new Los Angeles Hyatt hotel. Two and one-half years later he became resident manager of the first Hyatt Regency, the Atlanta property which made such a dramatic departure from traditional hotel design. Its imposing atrium lobby, with trees, hanging ivy and spectacular sculptures, its glass elevators and revolving rooftop restaurant made the hotel a city landmark. Not only did the design become a trademark of many subsequent Hyatt properties, it launched a new era in hotel architecture.

From Atlanta, Foley went to Chicago, in 1969, as vice president and general manager of the Hyatt Regency O'Hare. The upward move continued, with one year as regional vice president and general manager of the Houston Hyatt Regency before he became executive vice president of the company in corporate headquarters in Burlingame, Ca. In 1977, when the headquarters moved to Rosemont, a suburb of Chicago, he returned to familiar territory, this time as company president.

The Fraternity Influence

Washington State University and his membership in Phi Delta Theta joined in preparing him for a successful business career.

At WSU he received the opportunity to satisfy his need for learning, to broaden his horizons.

And through his fraternity he learned the discipline of study and the social graces which had not come to him in Kelso.

"I really did not know how to study when I left high school," he admits. "The fraternity discipline, which made study mandatory, even for athletes, was of the greatest possible value to me. And the poise derived from taking the rough edges off an 18-year-old youngster from a small town has brought lasting benefits.

"The fraternity helped me develop a better appreciation of what a university education really means, which is far more than prowess in athletics. And it helped me make friendships which stimulated my thinking and which have stayed with me through all the years since graduation.

"The fraternity environment was that added discipline which proved so important to me. Peer pressure and discipline are vital in all aspects of life. If a problem develops, it must be related to lack of discipline."

Foley returns regularly to visit with his parents in Kelso. They still live in the home in which he grew up. Even his old bedroom is unchanged. And the town itself has not changed much in the intervening decades.

Something that has changed, besides Foley's own life, is an area that he loved as a youth, the forested region near Mt. St. Helens. The eruption May 18, 1980, destroyed hills, lakes and rivers near the peak. On a recent visit home he chartered a light plane for a flight around the mountain,

"It was saddening," he recounts. "Such devastation cannot be believed without seeing it. I remember the beauty of the area. Now all that beauty is gone."

Management Philosophy

Foley is an executive who believes that best results come when employees feel they are part of their company, when their efforts are appreciated and when performance is rewarded.

"An important part of my life is being able to help people working for me, to improve their professional performances," he says. "People have given me good breaks all during my career, and I want to reciprocate whenever I can."

Foley is a firm believer in the one-on-one management style. A good executive, he says, must know every employee with whom he deals on a personal basis.

"People work not for you but with you," he says as he urges involvement of the Hyatt executive staff with those within the company and also in community activities.

He sets an example, both within the company and in the community. There, for instance, he is a member of the advisory committee of the Chicago Opportunities Industrialization Center, a skills training and job placement program, a member of the Mercy Hospital advisory board, a trustee of the Washington State University Foundation and a trustee of the advisory committee of the American Hotel and Motel Association.

The company retains its policy of promoting from within. Upward mobility has been the rule. not only in Foley's case but among those of dozens of other management people who have moved into managerial and executive roles as their talents became evident.

Hyatt properties all over the nation have the Foley mark on involvement with employees. The managers know their staffs, from the bellmen to the drivers to the maids . . . and are interested in their well being, in their problems, in their success.

There must be closeness if an organization is to succeed, Foley teaches. Strict rules of the old army type do not work in a modern business organization, he says, but there must be an understanding of why discipline is necessary and leadership to see that discipline is maintained.

"Working for Pat is not a snap," the manager of one Hyatt property says. "You work hard, to your full potential, because you know he is working hard, too, and expects that of you.

"But at the same time you enjoy what you are doing, for it is an experience in which sharing and understanding play such a large part."

What Foley and others in the Hyatt organization want to achieve is the creation of the finest hotel company in the world. There is a dedication to this corporate goal at all levels of the organization, in which a key to success has been the training, development and promotion from within of corporate management.

Hyatt keeps close personal relationships with its employees, gives them responsibilities at various levels and moves them upward whenever possible. Their growth is charted, so the company can bring those with potential into rewarding new posts.

Hyatt personnel has found job opportunities to be numerous during the years of major corporate expansion. Since his appointment as executive vice president of hotel operations in 1972, Foley has been involved in the opening of 40 hotel properties around the country, including three in Hawaii. You can imagine the number of job promotions those openings have meant.

Foley insists on decentralization of authority. The delegation of responsibility to local managers has been called astonishing by others in the hotel field. There are 10 regional vice presidents who not only are in charge of their respective hotels but also are responsible for supervising other properties in their regions. This extends as well to the Hvatt Management Operation Review, in which leaders in the rooms, food and beverage. personnel and engineering divisions work within the regions. They monitor their peers in other hotels while bringing back new ideas to their own operations.

The Touch of Hyatt

The Touch of Hyatt is a theme within the hotel organization. The company touch, Foley declares, must be evident in every contact with the customer, from the time a reservation is made to the check-in and throughout the guest's stay.

The Touch of Hyatt includes hostesses who direct guests to local attractions and activities, Regency Clubs where the ultimate in VIP service is provided, nightly turndown service, specialty restaurants and custom catering, Hyatt Passport Service for pre-registration, fast checkout service and complimentary newspapers with breakfast.

Computerized data provides corporate officers with businessbuilding knowledge, profiles of Hyatt's customers and advance looks at tomorrow's market.

The company feels the recession's impact on its particular portion of the traveling market will not greatly affect the corporation's future growth and earnings.

"There always will be people who will pay a premium price for quality," Foley says. "We want to be known always for the type of hotels we operate, the service we give, the food we serve."

You can sense quality the moment you enter the lobby of a Hvatt property. Take, for instance, the Grand Hyatt New York, which opened in the fall of 1980. The hotel soars 30 stories above one of the busiest crossroads in the world, next to Grand Central Station. It is a symbol of the revitalization of New York and brings the city the first domestic Hyatt Hotel, complementing the United Nations Plaza, which is operated by the sister corporation, Hyatt International.

The $100-million reconstruction of the once-famous Commodore Hotel was a joint effort of the Hyatt Corporation and the Trump Organization, which acquired the Commodore for $10 million in 1975.

In the '70s, Foley and others in the Hyatt organization saw a great opportunity in New York City, which urgently needed new luxury hotel space. They undertook in the rebuilding of the Commodore a project that had hotel people shaking their heads. The venerable hotel was stripped and rebuilt. In its place came the Grand Hvatt at a cost of more than $70,000 for each of its 1,400 guest rooms. Others in the hotel field wondered at the wisdom of this major investment when a recession was looming, but Hyatt was convinced that the growing international trade, plus the normal commercial and tourist business of New York City, would keep the hotel busy. The belief was correct. The hotel has been filled since its opening.

A Hyatt decision to place its hotels as close to major city convention centers as possible has been responsible for much of the company's success. It was based on the realization that more and more visitors going to conventions and conferences will want quality rooms and service in convenient locations.

Of the 55 now existing Hyatt hotels, several are within an across-the-street walk from a convention facility. An example is in New Orleans, where the Superdome not only is next door but also is operated by a sister company. It is the case at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare in Chicago, directly across from the entrance to the Rosemont Exposition Center. And it is the case, too, in Knoxville, Indianapolis and other cities.

What's ahead for Hyatt under Foley's leadership?

Continuous expansion, for the Hyatt policy is to move forward, to help fill the growing need for quality hotel rooms, not only in major cities but also in resort areas.

Foley, who completed an advanced business management course at Harvard in 1980, says there must be continuing attention on the part of management to the needs and wants of the customer. To do this, he says, management must keep learning and progressing.

"There must be continuing opportunity for those who work with you, with suitable recognition and advancement," he explains.

"You cannot have these unless you are committed to a policy of growth, unless you have the courage of your conviction that comes from careful analysis of all the data available for you and the full support of an informed, aggressive, dedicated management team."

O'HARE: Hyatt Regency O'Haire was one of Pat Foley's first stops on the management ladder at Hyatt Hotels. It is located near the busy O'Hare International Airport in Chicago.

McDonald, Stanleigh B. (Butler '48). Ten Weeks to a Better Job. Garden City: Doubleday & Company, Inc., 1972. 239 pp. Given by author.

Looking for a job can be the most frustrating and difficult business in an executive's career. The search takes time, careful planning, and the conservation of contacts and energy. Whether you are unemployed or just looking, the victim of office politics or the economic squeeze, whatever the reason, there are certain do's and dont's that can make all the difference in finding the right job. This book tells you what they are.

Beginning where the search for a job begins, Mr. McDonald shows how to compose the all-important resume which, he believes, should be the first step in the campaign to sell yourself to a new company. Step-by-step, he demonstrates how to organize your experience and skills into the kind of resume that will be noticed and acted upon.

From there, the author moves on to the many and varied steps the job-seeker must take, presenting them in clear and orderly instructions that will enable you to cope with any situation that may arise. The book is in fact, a job-hunter's log: what to do this week, what to plan for next week, what to re-do, and when.

Stanleigh B. McDonald is a management consultant now specializing in business planning and organization development.

Considering the challenges that leaders in higher education—administrators, department heads, and faculty members—face in the 1980s, this book could not be more timely. In Management, Governance and Leadership: A Guide For College and University Administrators, John D. Millett synthesizes his extensive knowledge of college organization and administration for the benefit of all who are or aspire to be leaders in higher education.

Dr. Millett emphasizes that management, governance, and leadership are not just different words with the same meaning. Management undertakes the required planning, which must involve all managers of the organization in the process. Governance involves making the decisions concerning purposes, policies, programs, and resources. Leadership provides the essential link between management and governance.

John D. Millett is eminently qualified to speak out on the subject of college and university administration. Having enjoyed a distinguished career as teacher, administrator, and author, Dr. Millett is one of the foremost authorities in the field today. Among the top administrative posts he has held are Chancellor of the Ohio Board of Regents and President of Miami University, Oxford. Ohio.

James J. Nance served the Cleveland State University as its Founder-Chairman. The university's location in mid-city Cleveland, its design as a commuter urban university, and its rapid growth are all testimony to his insight, dedication and management skills. After his tenure as a university trustee, the James J. Nance School of Business Administration was named in recognition of his service.

As this university considered an Executive-in-Residence program to establish closer ties between academe and the business world, it was obvious that the first executive participant should be James J. Nance. He took the invitation as a serious educational challenge and delivered three exciting lectures which provide not only scholarship but interesting history.

It is hoped that these lectures will be useful to students, faculties, and the nation's working executives.

NEWSFRONTS

A traditional mud football rivalry between Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Alpha Epsilon at the University of Michigan that dates back to 1934 was mentioned in a November issue of Sports Illustrated. The Mudbowl has become synonymous with Homecoming and may be the oldest and best of college fraternity mud contests according to Mark Bentley, vice president of Michigan Alpha.

Alumni of Wisconsin Alpha recently donated $2,550 and pledged another $330 to help pay for the construction of a kitchen in the chapter house. The donations were in response to a letter from Chapter Adviser Dick DeWitt. The brothers had borrowed money and built a kitchen so they would no longer have to order evening meals from the University Student Union.

Quebec Alpha brothers at McGill have set up an experimental escort service for women leaving the MacLennan Library at night. This was in response to an alarming number of sexual attacks on female students using the library at night. Their efforts received a major story and a picture in the Montreal Gazette.

In addition, the chapter recently raised $1,600 from a furniture sale and a further $400 from a benefit party for the Montreal 1980 Centraide campaign (United Way).

NIC Adopts

The 52-member National Interfraternity Conference, of which Phi Delta Theta is a member, has re-stated its long-stand opposition to hazing by adopting a new "Resolution Against Hazing."

The resolution states that the Conference fully expects each fraternity to take appropriate action to implement the intent of the legislation. As a further step, the Conference has established a monitoring committee to note the incidence of hazing activities.

The resolution reads as follows:

'Resolution Against Hazing'

"Be It Resolved That The National Interfraternity Conference hereby unequivocally repeats its historic repudiation of any preinitiation practices antithetical to the laws and underlying principles for which each member fraternity stands;

Further, that this body expects each fraternity to take appropriate action to implement the intent of this resolution;

Further, that the Conference not only records its continuing disapproval of hazing in the strongest possible terms, but declares its intention to monitor closely the incidence of this activity through the establishment of a special ad hoc committee for such purpose; and

Further, that the fraternities whose names appear below endorse this resolution."

All 52 fraternities signed the resolution.

NIC is a federation of those 52 fraternities with about 4,800 chapters at approximately 640 colleges and universities in the United States and Canada.

THE PHI CRIER

*Quebec Alpha has just raised over $2,000 for Centraide, the Canadian equivalent of United Way. The money was raised through a furniture auction and benefit social.

*Kansas Beta at Washburn hosted the children of St. Vincent's Home for Neglected and Abused Children to a day of food and football on Oct. 4. The children were served hamburgers for lunch, and then a game of touch football was played with the actives. That evening, the children were taken to the Washburn-Pittsburgh State football

*The Florida Delta Chapter completed a 48-hour "Bounce-A-Thon" for the Muscular Dystrophy Association during Labor Day weekend. With participation from over 95% of the actives, the chapter, in cooperation with a local Pizza Hut, raised $300. For 48 hours non-stop, brothers drew shifts to keep a basketball bouncing to attract attention from local residents and commuters off a busy roadway in Coral Gables. To raise funds, Pizza Hut offered $1 off coupons to customers buying any size pizza.

NEW IDEAS

*The brothers of Florida Alpha have created an officer's position for Community Affairs. This officer gathers information to help make the brothers award of services offered by the University, as well as positions open in student government, IFC and faculty-student related committees.

He also makes the brothers award of volunteer positions open in the community, such as working as a coach or drive coordinator, etc. This has helped to make Florida Alpha one of the outstanding chapters on the campus in community service and campus involvement.

*Phi Delts at Washburn held a "Legal Night" on Sept. 29. The event, which was intended to give members and pledges the opportunity to meet and talk with some of the distinguished Phis of the Topeka legal community, was attended by 25 attorneys, two of whom are Kansas Supreme Court justices, Harold Herd and David Prager.

*Jim Weltram, scholarship chairman at Washington Gamma, has developed a new academic program reflecting practices of the top five WSU chapters. The program teams up big and little brothers to study as a team for a total of 20 hours each per week. This innovative move has been received quite well by the entire chapter.

ON CAMPUS

*Mike Stater, president of Kentucky Eta, is also vice president of public relations for IFC. His development of many new programs and printed materials has led to one of the largest campus rush periods ever.

*Bill Lucas of Colorado Alpha at the University of Colorado was selected as this fall's Homecoming King in campuswide balloting.

MIAMI "BOUNCE-A-THON": One Miami Phi rests while another takes his turn bouncing a basketball to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association during the Labor Day weekend. Dickinson Celebrates Century Anniversary

On the weekend of October 25th, 1980, Phi Delta Theta celebrated its 100th Anniversary at Dickinson College. Over 100 alumni returned from all over the country for what was the largest affair in recent years at Pennsylvania Epsilon.

On the first day of the celebration the chapter had a cocktail party with a live band. There was a large tent at the football game the next day followed by a banquet and then a dance at the chapter house featuring another live band. On the final day of the festivities, a reception at the fraternity followed a service conducted by Rev. Kermit L. Loyd, the former advisor of the chapter.

There were many honored guests at the celebration. Tal Bray, a General Council representative, made the trip to Dickinson to attend the festivities. Bob Ganoe, class of 1916, was honored as the oldest returning Phi. Ganoe was also inducted into the Golden Legion in a ceremony during the banquet on Saturday evening. He was obviously deeply touched at the unexpected honors reaped upon him.

Reverend Lloyd, affectionately known as Padre, was honored for his many years of service to the chapter. Kevin Hess, a local alumnus was also honored for his contributions to the centennial effort.

WASHBURN COMMUNITY SER-VICE: Phis at Washburn hosted the children of St. Vincent's Home for Neglected and abused Children to a day of food and football on Oct. 4. After a hamburger lunch the actives played a game of touch football with the children.

Texas Mu Added, Ohio Re-Installed

One new chapter has been added to the ranks of the fraternity while an old one has rejoined the rolls following a brief absence.

The Texas MU Colony of Phi Delta Theta was installed on Oct. 17-18 at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos, Texas, while the Ohio Gamma Colony installation at Ohio University was held Nov. 7 and 8.

Twenty-nine colony brothers were initiated at Southwest Texas on Oct. 17 and over 100 guests attended the installation ceremonies the next day included a reception at the chapter house and a banquet later on that evening.

The chapter is doing very well with 17 fall Phikeais and active alumni support, especially from Chapter Adviser Carol Burton.

Texas Mu becomes the 11th active chapter in Texas which has more active Phi Delt chapters than any other state.

Ohio Gamma

Phi Delta Theta was originally chartered at Ohio University in March, 1868. The chapter continued for 108 years until the charter was revoked by the 61st Biennial Convention in 1976. This action was taken due to organizational problems and the chapter house was sold by the house corporation. Up until the revocation in 1976, Ohio Gamma had initiated 1,571 men.

Ohio University in Athens was founded in 1808 and was during this time, the oldest institution of higher learning in the Northwest Territory. It is a co-educational university and presently there are 17 fraternities and 11 sororities on campus with approximate enrollment of 16,000.

The original recolonization attempt was made in April, 1979. A nucleus of men was established and alumni advisers were identified. The colony continued to develop, increasing in size and eventually acquiring a colony house.

On Friday, Nov. 7, the 25 colony members were initiated into Phi Delta Theta. The ceremony took place at the Athens Elks Lodge and General Council Member John W. (Bill) Stitt II (Mississippi '54) served as president. He was assisted by Robert A. Biggs (Georgia Southern '76), director of chapter services; Dave Gierhart (Ohio U '63), chapter adviser; and undergraduate brothers from Ohio Alpha (Miami) and Ohio Theta (U of Cincinnati). Following the initiation ceremony, an open house was hosted by the newly initiated brothers for alumni, university and Greek representatives and guests.

Reinstallation

The reinstallation ceremony began Saturday morning at the Athens First Methodist Church. The reinstallation team included Stitt, Biggs, Gierhard, as well as Alan Okun, Richard Walters, James Ferguson, Herb Evans, and Dr. Fred Preston. The adviser. Dave Gierhart, served as warden and brought forward Colony President Mike Summers. Stitt officially returned the charter and presented it to Summers. Several alumni, parents and guests witnessed this ceremony and the return of the Ohio Gamma Charter

After this event, everyone had the opportunity to enjoy a football game between Ohio University and Marshall University. One of the highlights included the Phi Delt flag being carried around the track within the stadium.

The reinstallation banquet was held later during the evening at the Ohio University Inn. Approximately 110 guests welcomed Ohio Gamma back to Ohio University. The Master of Ceremonies was Kenneth Kerr (Ohio U '46) who provided everyone some humor and wit. General Council Member Stitt served as the keynote speaker. Remarks were also made by Jennifer Davis, the student life director, Gierhart and Summers. Several recognitions were given to certain individuals for their hard work and Brother Charles Reamer (Ohio U '33) was honored as becoming one of Ohio Gamma's most recent Golden Legionnaires.

Finally, a reception was held for everyone following the banquet and social entertainment was provided at the chapter house. The newly initiated brothers of Ohio Gamma are very proud of their accomplishments and invite all Phis to visit them whenever in the Athens area.

Offensive Standouts Pace All-Phis

BY DR. JOHN DAVIS, JR. (Washburn '38) Scroll Sports Editor

The 1980 All-Phi football team is paced on both offense and defense from the winning teams of Penn State, Baylor Lawrence and Hanover with 16 honorary positions.

The offense is paced by the best running backs in several years, Scott Reppert (Lawrence '83), a Kodak All-American selection who rushed for a fantastic 1,223 yards despite missing one game with an injury, and Gary Cushing (Hanover '82), who rushed for 1,064 yards with the fourth-ranked NAIA Division II team.

Completing the backfield is Rob Doyle (DePauw '82) at quarterback and Jeff Carter (Hanover '82) at wide receiver. Doyle, co-captain for '81 and current chapter president, was the fraternity's top offensive performer with 2,251 yards and a 60% completion record. Carter was a second team NAIA All-American and had 48 receptions for 945 yards and 12 scores.

The offensive ends are unanimous Todd Sheets (Northwestern '81), co-captain who had 570 yards this year and a career Phi Honor Roll of 1,515 career reception yards, and Tom DeLattre (Valparaiso '81), co-captain and second team All-Heartland Conference selection who had 37 receptions for 647 yards and made the Phi Honor Roll with 1,003 career reception yards.

The tackles are a unanimous pair, Ken Urbanski (Lawrence '82), two-time All-Midwest Conference selection, and Peter Speros (Penn State '83).

The guards are also a unanimous pair, John Wojtowicz (Penn State '81) and Don Petrosius (Ball State '81), an All-Mid-American selection. At center

(Vanderbilt '81). Ron Reising (Lawrence '82), a second team All-Midwest conference choice was placed on the honorary team at middle guard.

Linebackers include Dave Schrader (Wabash '82), who had 79 tackles and three interceptions; Bill Spreeman (Lawrence '82), an All-Midwest pick who led the Vikings in tackles with 112; and Ken Newsome (Virginia '81), a three-year starter who called defensive signals. He was selected to the All-ACC Academic team and received the school's "Pete Gary Memorial Leadership" award.

The backs are repeater Lou Tiberi (Northwestern '82), who had 36 tackles and led in kick-off returns; Greg Israel (Texas Tech '83), who had 41 tackles and two interceptions; and Mike Spaude (Ripon '82), who was named second team All Midwest conference and had three interceptions along wth fielding punts and kick-offs.

A half dozen fine football players did not receive enough ballot points from the All-Phi Board to make the first two teams, but should receive special mention. Kurt Unglaud (Florida State '81), an All-Phi pick in 1978, missed the '79 season with an injury and was an alternate starter this year. Mike Brannon (Baylor '82), the "MVP" of the Peach Bowl last year, came back from knee surgery to be an alternate in the Bear backfield.

Linebacker Bob Humble (Colorado '81) started every game the past two years as the Buffalos struggled through two losing seasons. Former All-Phi linebacker Steve Griffiths (Penn State '81) alternated this year for the Lions and Chris Schnell (Ripon '81) had six interceptions for his team.
